FOOTBALL

I used to wake up by 7 to play. At that time I was not much familiar with football so I used to play in my new white jeans, I know stupid but after some days, I learned many new things. For example, I learned about different players with their different tactics and many more. When I started my position was a goalkeeper because I was very new at that point. Then it took time to understand the important things like controlling the ball, having a good vision, how to save a goal, and many other things. I used to wake up by 7 to play.

At that time I was not much familiar with football so I used to play in my new white jeans, I know stupid but after some days, I learned many new things.

For example, I learned about different players with their different tactics and many more.

When I started my position was a goalkeeper because I was very new at that point. Then it took time to understand the important things like controlling the ball, having a good vision, how to save a goal, and many other things. During that time we only used to play 4v4 (2 strikers, 1 defender, and a keeper). As the days passed we started playing on a huge ground where almost a full game can be played with 11 players each in a team. But in my area, there were not many kids who used to play football so we only had 6 or 7 players in a team. In football, Every position is a responsibility. It's not like 2 are playing good and one is just chilling. There has to be an equal contribution from each team member. In the beginning, we weren't so good at the game so we use to wind up in about 15-20mins. Because we were not so fit, had low stamina, and had some fear "what if the ball hits right on the face or head" and the main reason being the guardians will yell. But passion is a different thing and at that time football was the priority. In a day I would miss studies, meeting friends, phone but football not a chance.

The minute it was 4 pm I left everything aside and just remembered nothing is more worthy than going out and playing football, for that I bunked classes, at times lied about going out with friends but met them on the field and the list goes on. First of all, each position needs an active, fit, sensible player who plays with a team and not solos.

Solo ones end up falling on the ground or they fall on nets of turfs because being confident and having self-confidence is good but having overconfidence leads you to failures.

So now let me tell you about the different players.

There are defenders, midfielders, forward.

There are managers who manage the team so if I go by different position-wise for example

In forward (striker, Center-Forward, winger)

In midfield (Center midfielder, Defensive midfielder, attacking midfielder, wide midfielder )

In defense (Center B, Sweeper, Full B, wing B)

And a keeper.

Strikers wingers are important the way keeper and defenders vice versa.

You need someone to goal right it's not like you alone can defend strike and goal. You need support you need your teammate whom you can trust.

My favorite position is Center Back/FullBack. they both are defensive positions because Defending is an Art its not as easy as what we see on tv, it requires a lot of patience, stamina, reading the player's skills on how many tries and ways he will take the score.

When one is defending he has to read and imagine the tactics of the opponent, One cannot be careless while defending if 1 player missed an opponent then the chances of goal is 99%, not even 50% and at that moment anything can happen, Some players even hit other players when they lose the ball and that's a foul play which is not good behavior or can say not fit for that player to play in a team or any other places. Nowadays I play for more than 2 hours and those 2 hours always bring joy to my life whether if it's a happy day or sad it always gets better after playing football.
